Wherever you find critical electrical connections up to 70 amp., you are likely to find K&H solderless connectors. K&H solderless connectors have been available since 1937 and are widely used today.

K&H solderless connectors are suitable for all applications, including cryogenics, elevated temperatures, and oceanic environments.

K&H solderless connectors are manufactured from ETP copper and then nickel plated to ensure high conductance and prevent costly oxidation. Parts are also available in brass or steel, and can be plated to your specifications.

K&H cup washers are versatile and can be used anywhere a flat washer would be used to improve performance, especially in areas of high vibration or thermal cycling. These connectors are essential where maximum conductor contact is required.
